

BAA-BAA blocked sheep

A large herd of sheep blocked the small country road in Sardinia, Italy, making it impossible for our cousin's tiny blue car to pass ~ a comical and rare sight for us Americanos. We had no choice but to wait until the animals "baa'ed" out of our way. (Where was Little Bo Peep when we needed her?)

Not being in any rush (most Italians aren't), we laughed, snapped a few pics, and waited 'til the sheep meandered into the field.

On life's journey, often things get in our way. Blockages ruin progress and movement, goals and dreams. Sometimes we even subconsciously "create" blockage and place it in front of our paths, letting a subconscious fear stop us from taking the next step. We have two choices: 1) wait out the road blockage or, 2) figure out how to maneuver around the dumb sheep.

Abstract "things" that obstruct us have absolutely no sense of our precious time nor do they care if they inconvenience us. We each have control of our shepherd's hooks ...
